

Psychosocial interventions and their effects on the trajectory of immigrant women in Chile Intervenciones psicosociales y sus efectos en la trayectoria de mujeres inmigradas en Chile

Galaz, V. Caterine

Álvarez, Catalina

Hedrera, Luciana

Becerra, Margarita María

Part of the analysis on migration in Chile focuses on immigrant subjects and their level of inclusion in different social spheres. Therefore we turn our eyes towards psychosocial intervention: from a feminist perspective, we look at the ways interventions act and generate psychosocial effects and the "line of flight" (Deleuze & Guattari, 1988/2012) that escapes hegemonic practices. For this, a set of Narrative Productions was carried out with interveners and users, which through a process of figuration, made it possible to understand the multiple bridges of opening, closure and contradiction that overlap in the trajectories of immigrant women and their passage through civil and public services.