

Applying the Innov8 approach for reviewing national health programmes to leave no one behind: lessons learnt from Indonesia

Koller, Theadora Swift

Saint, Victoria

Floranita, Rustini

Koemara Sakti, Gita Maya

Pambudi, Imran

Hermawan, Lukas

Briot, Benedicte

Frenz, Patricia

Solar, Orielle

Campos, Pilar

Villar, Eugenio

Magar, Veronica

© 2018 WHO. Published by Informa UK Limited, trading as Taylor & Francis Group. The World Health Organization's Innov8 Approach for Reviewing National Health Programmes to Leave No One Behind is an eight-step process that supports the operationalization of the Sustainable Development Goals' commitment to 'leave no one behind'. In 2014-2015, Innov8 was adapted and applied in Indonesia to review how the national neonatal and maternal health action plans could become more equity-oriented, rights-based and gender-responsive, and better address critical social determinants of health. The process was led by the Indonesian Ministry of Health, with the support of WHO. It involved a wide range of actors and aligned with/fed into the drafting of the maternal newborn health action plan and the implementation planning of the newborn action plan. Key activities included a sensitization meeting, diagnostic checklist, review workshop and in-country work by the review teams. This 'methods forum' artic